Report of "Waste Reduction" Initiative

The students of DLLE department took an initiative towards reducing the use of paper cups with the motto of "Save Paper Save Trees".

The students bought and distributed small glass cups to all the teaching and non-teaching faculty members of Pharmacy Department with a nominal charge of Rs. 25/- for each cup.

The main motive behind this initiative that we observe usage of paper cups for drinking tea by all the staff members and hence accumulation of piles of paper cups on daily basis. Though paper cups are recyclable, there is burden on mother nature due to cutting down of million of trees every year to make these paper,

ORS Campaign

Introduction

Acute diarrhea is a major problem worldwide, although the overall mortality rate from diarrheal disease has steadily declined over the last few decades¹). The critical factor for the reduction in the World Health Organization oral rehydration solution (WHO-ORS) was initially assessed for cholera treatment, and then shown to be effective irrespective of cause of diarrhea or age of the patient²). However, the WHO-ORS does not substantially decrease either stool volume or the duration of diarrhea episodes³). As a result, improved ORSs for enhancing treatment of acute diarrhea continually have been sought for and evaluated.

Project Location

Project Description/ Intent/Concept

In an adult, the daily intestinal water load is approximately 6,500 mL from the combination of oral intake, gastric juices and pancreaticobiliary juices, as well as an additional 1,000 mL secreted by the upper intestine. This volume is reduced to 1,500 mL by the distal ileum and is further reduced in the colon to a stool output of 250 mL per day. The net absorption of water and ions is the result of two opposing unidirectional fluxes of ions, one absorptive and the other secretory. And the two processes are anatomically separated: absorption takes place mainly in the mature villous cells, whereas secretion seems to occur in the crypt cells. In normal circumstances, absorptive processes for water and electrolytes prevail over secretory processes and as a result, water is absorbed. However, during diarrheal disease, there is a derangement in the absorptive-secretory processes by osmotic and/or secretory mechanisms. The absorption of water and nutrients is dependent on the osmotic gradient dictated by sodium transport via the following three mechanisms: neutral NaCl absorption, sodium absorption coupled to the absorption of organic solutes such as glucose and amino acids, and electrogenic sodium absorption. In diarrheal disease, disruption of these processes occurs except the sodium absorption coupled glucose and other organic solutes, even in enteritis associated with epithelial damage. The preservation of this facilitated cotransporter of glucose and sodium is the scientific rationale for the development of the ORS. By this intact Na⁺/glucose cotransporter, unaffected by pathologic processes that induce secretion, sodium and water are absorbed and in turn, extracellular fluid is expanded without change in serum osmolarity.

Conducted Camp Description:

ORS has been used successfully in the treatment of diarrheal illness and has resulted in a reduction in childhood mortality from diarrhea. The standard WHO-ORS has been used to replace water and electrolytes lost in stools, but it does not decrease diarrhea duration or the stool volume. This has led to search for modified ORSs with improved efficacy. Reduced osmolality ORS is superior in that it has been found to decrease the fecal volume and duration of diarrhea. Because of that, it is currently used as a recommended ORS formulation by the WHO for the treatment of acute non-cholera diarrhea. The addition of zinc supplementation is recommended by WHO in the treatment of acute diarrhea. Polymer-based ORS seems to be superior than the standard WHO-ORS for treating acute diarrhea. Further studies against the current reduced osmolality ORS are needed. We have given the information about the ORS to the people of (TRUST NAME ADDRESS) and concluding the success of this event.

World Patient Safety Day- Project Proposal

An initiative by the Patient Safety and Pharmacovigilance (PSPV) Department -
Boehringer Ingelheim India

Project Background:

The PSPV team has always focused and emphasized on Patient Safety and their well-being. Every year the PSPV team has been organizing events based on the WHO theme for world patient safety day which is held on 17th September. For the year 2022 WHO has declared the theme as Medication Safety.

The project focuses on Medication Error: What is it, The various categories that fall into it, How an individual may come across it in his day to day life and How it can be avoided.

Project Objective:

1. To spread awareness.
2. Contribute to decrease the occurrence of medication errors.

Project Scope:

The theme Medication Safety is highly relevant to the Patient and Caregiver community and the PSPV team wishes to make the most out of it. Medication error is such a topic that one may come across in his/her daily life but may go unnoticed due to the lack of awareness and we wish to change that. We intend to reach out to people in the interiors of the country by organizing a road show in a dispensary/public area. Using daily life instances and exact scenarios based on these instances making it simple for the people to relate to and understand how to prevent such errors. We wish to collaborate with your esteemed organization to help carry out this project in the rural areas and help prevent adversities that can be avoided just by spreading a little awareness.

*All the volunteers will be provided with a certificate on behalf of Boehringer Ingelheim PSPV team.

BLOOD DONATION CAMPAIGN

As known, safe blood and blood products and their transfusion are a critical aspect of care and public health. They save millions of lives and improve the health and quality of life of many patients every day. The need for blood is universal, but access to blood for all those who need it is not. Being aware of this situation, the PHO committee of Oriental College of Pharmacy had organized a Blood Donation campaign as a small contribution to the society. The Campaign was organized on 8th December 2021 in association with Samarpan Blood Centre. The campaign was inaugurated by the Principal Dr. (Mrs.) Sudha Rathod. The donors were provided with refreshments, certificates and gifts after donating their blood. They were also given the Donor's Card benefits. More than 40 donors donated their blood on that day. The campaign was promoted by sharing the posters on respective social media handles of the college and members. People were also personally contacted and informed by the members. The campaign was successfully held under the guidance of Dr. (Mrs.) Sudha Rathod (Principal of OCP), Mr. Imtiyaz Ansari (PHO In charge) and with the efforts taken by the PHO Committee.
